THE TWILIGHT OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY

The Evolution of Anglo-Asian Commerce and Politics, 1790–1860

ANTHONY WEBSTER

This book offers an overview of British commercial, financial and political relations with India and the Far East from 1790 to 1860. It shows how the changing nature of trade and the changing nature of associated political lobbying brought about the evolution of the East India Company from commercial company to the mechanism of British rule in India and subsequently to its abolition.

Makes an important contribution to our understanding, not only of British imperialism in general, but also of the way in which the transition between mercantilism and liberalism actually took place and the nature of the challenges that the free market economy created. THE INDO-GERMAN IDENTIFICATION

Reconciling South Asian Origins and European Destinies, 1765–1885

ROBERT COWAN

Nineteenth century German intellectuals such as Novalis, Schelling, and Friedrich Schlegel attempted to reconcile what they saw as Germany's cultural origins in ancient India with their imagined destiny as saviors of Europe, then shifted to Indophobia when the attempt foundered. The views of Hegel, Schopenhauer, and Nietzsche on India were disastrously misappropriated in the twentieth century. This book argues that the study of an “Indo-German” ideal continues to offer lessons about cultural difference in the “post-national” twenty first century.

Robert Cowan's book takes the scholarly discourse on German Orientalism in an important new direction with his thoroughly researched and well argued reminder that the subjects of our work were real human beings, real individuals, who brought their personal psychological, philosophical, religious, and political baggage to the reading table.
