The Political Economy of Everyday Life in Africa
Beyond the Margins

Edited by WALE ADEBANWI

Multi-disciplinary examination of the role of ordinary African people as agents in the generation and distribution of well-being in modern Africa.

What are the fundamental issues, processes, agency and dynamics that shape the political economy of life in modern Africa? The contributors – experts in anthropology, history, political science, economics, conflict and peace studies, philosophy and language – examine the opportunities and constraints placed on living a sustainable life in Africa. Reflecting on why and how the political economy of everyday life approach is essential for understanding the social process in modern Africa, they analyse money and currency; migrant labour forces and informal and formal economies; dispossession of land; debt and indebtedness; socio-economic marginality; and the entrenchment of colonial and apartheid pasts. The influential Africanist economic anthropologist Jane Guyer provides an Afterword.

WALE ADEBANWI is the Rhodes Professor of Race Relations at the University of Oxford. He is author of Nation as Grand Narrative: The Nigerian Press and the Politics of Meaning (University of Rochester Press).

Christopher Okigbo 1930-67
Thirsting for Sunlight

OBI NWAKANMA

This first biography is now in paperback marking the 50th anniversary of the start of the Nigeria-Biafra War and the anniversary of the death of Christopher Okigbo, the most anthologized modern African poet.

Christopher Okigbo, once described as “Africa’s most lyrical poet of the twentieth century” was killed in September 1967, fighting for the independence of Biafra. The manner in which Okigbo died typified the passionate, tortured and dramatic quality of his life. Widely considered along with Wole Soyinka and Chinua Achebe as part of modern Nigeria’s greatest literary triumvirate, Okigbo’s death promoted him to cult status among subsequent generations of African writers. Okigbo left behind a small but inspired body of lyrical verse which grew from his fascination with his mystical Igbo roots and with the poets of the classical world of Greece and Rome. Yet NWakamna has written not just a biography of the poet but also a biography of the nation, and of an important time in the making of nation, giving powerful insights into the postcolonial transition in Nigeria and West Africa.

OBI NWAKANMA, journalist and poet, is Assistant Professor in the English Department, University of Central Florida, Orlando.

Electricity in Africa
The Politics of Transformation in Uganda

CHRISTOPHER GORE

Examines the history of electricity provision in Africa and the effects of privatization and infrastructure changes in energy transformation, offering a critical window into development politics in African states.

No country has managed to develop beyond a subsistence economy without at least minimum access to electricity for the majority of its population. Yet many sub-Saharan African countries struggle to meet demand. Christopher Gore examines the politics and processes surrounding electricity infrastructure, provision and reform, including the shifting role of national governments and multilateral agencies. Drawing on extensive research in Uganda, which has one of the lowest levels of access to electricity in Africa and has struggled to construct several large hydroelectric dams on the Nile, Gore argues that there is a critical need to recognize how the changing political and social context affects the capacity to fulfil national energy goals, to minimize energy poverty and transform economies.

CHRISTOPHER GORE is Associate Professor, Department of Politics and Public Administration, Ryerson University, Toronto, Canada.

The War Within
New Perspectives on the Civil War in Mozambique, 1976-1992

Edited by ERIC MORIER-GENOUD, MICHEL CAHEN & DOMINGOS M. DO ROSÁRIO

A fresh analysis of the post-colonial war in Mozambique that contributes to debates about conflict, peacebuilding, development and nationalism and offers insights into the nature of contemporary politics and the current conflict.

The 1976-1992 civil war which opposed the Government of Frelimo and the Renamo guerrillas is a central event in the history of Mozambique. This book re-evaluates the period by looking at the conflict as a “total social phenomena” that involved all elements of society and impacted on every aspect of life in the country. The volume examines not only Frelimo and Renamo but also actors such as private, popular and state militias, the Catholic Church, NGOs and traders. Based on a wholly new set of sources, the book uncovers new dimensions of the civil war and offers an alternative narrative and explanatory framework for the conflict as well as a solid background for understanding the nature of peacemaking in Mozambique, contemporary politics and the current conflict in the country.

ERIC MORIER-GENOUD is a Lecturer in African history at Queen’s University Belfast. DOMINGOS MANUEL DO ROSÁRIO is Lecturer in electoral sociology and electoral governance at Eduardo Mondlane University, Maputo, Mozambique. MICHEL CAHEN is a Senior Researcher at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) at Bordeaux Political Studies Institute and at the Casa de Velázquez in Madrid.

The story of how African farmers, African-American scientists, and British businessmen struggled to turn colonial Africa into a major cotton-producing region. Britons insisted that cotton was the “black man’s crop” and that the future of cotton lay in Africa, rather than America. African-American scientists embraced this project, reinforcing British colonialism but also discovering a diasporic connection to Africa. Some African farmers profited from cotton, but most suffered under new regulations and coercive policies as Britain struggled to compete with American cotton.

Afro-European Trade in the Atlantic World

The Western Slave Coast, c. 1550–c. 1885

SILKE STRICKRODT

A uniquely detailed account of the dynamics of Afro-European trade in two states on the western Slave Coast over three centuries and the transition from slave trade to legitimate commerce. This book examines Afro-European trade relations on the western Slave Coast c.1550-c.1885 in Grand Popo (now in Benin) and Little Popo (now in Togo), the transition from slave trading to legitimate commerce, and the region’s position in the wider trans-Atlantic trade network. Situated between the Gold Coast to the west and the eastern Slave Coast to the east, these states were pivotal in slave trading in the region, supplying provisions to Europeans and facilitating communication along the coast between the trading companies’ headquarters and their factories.

SILKE STRICKRODT is Visiting Research Fellow at the Department of African Studies and Anthropology at the University of Birmingham.

Slavery Hinterland

Transatlantic Slavery and Continental Europe, 1680-1850

Edited by FELIX BRAHM & EVE ROSENHAFT

Contributors from the US, Britain and Europe explore a neglected aspect of transatlantic slavery: the implication of a continental European hinterland. This book focuses on historical actors in territories that were not directly involved in the traffic in Africans but linked in various ways with the transatlantic slave business, the plantation economies that it fed and the consequences of its abolition. It unravels material and economic entanglements of the Continental and Atlantic economies and also proposes a new agenda for the historical study of the relationship between business and morality. A key theme of the volume is the question of conscience, or awareness of being morally implicated in an immoral enterprise.

Mechanized Gold Mining in the Gold Coast Colony, 1879-1909

CASSANDRA MARK-THIESEN

An innovative study of labor relations, particularly the interactions of recruitment agents and migrant workers, in the mining concessions of Wassa, Gold Coast Colony, 1879 to 1909. This book focuses on one of West Africa's earliest large-scale industries, namely the Wassa gold mines in the southwest Gold Coast during the period 1879 to 1909. Author Cassandra Mark-Thiesen explores the plurality of labor relations that characterized the mining concessions, noting particularly the role of the labor agents who regularly recruited groups of migrant laborers, both male and female, to work the mines. The book discusses these agents' means of employment and their influence on the informalization and indentureship of labor. In means of employment and their influence on the work the mines. Al-Hakkamat Baggara Women of Darfur

SUAD M.E. MUSA

Analyses the involvement of the agro-pastoral al-Hakkamat Baggara women of Darfur in Sudan's recent civil wars and the implications of this for conflict resolution and peacebuilding.

Al-Hakkamat Baggara women hold an instrumental position in rural Sudan, wielding agency, social and political power, and understanding how they can contribute to the resolution and resettlement processes is vital to sustainable reconciliation and post-conflict transformation of the unstable state. This book uncovers their significant, but widely overlooked, role during the war in Darfur from the 1970s to today's continuing conflict. The book explores the influence they exercised through their poems and songs, informal speech and symbolic acts, and analyses their impact in both social and political domains. Challenging the pervasive portrayal of women as natural peacebuilders and as passive and submissive, the author highlights how Sudan's state government co-opted al-Hakkamat Baggara women to lobby on its behalf, to rally for war and to advocate for peace.

SUAD M.E. MUSA is Assistant Professor for women and gender studies at The Royal University for Women in the Kingdom of al-Bahrain.

The Ethiopian Student Movement, c. 1960-1974

BAHRU ZEWDE

An account of the rise of Ethiopia's student movement by one of those involved, its role in overthrowing the imperial regime, and its impact on the shaping of the country's future. In the 20th and 21st centuries, Ethiopia has undergone a long transformation from empire to modern nation state. Bahru Zewde, one of the students involved in the uprising, draws on interviews with former student leaders and activists, to describe the steady radicalisation of the movement, characterised particularly after 1965 by annual demonstrations against the regime and culminating in the ascendancy of Marxism-Leninism by the early 1970s.

The Politics of Peacemaking in Africa
Non-State Actors’ Role in the Liberian Civil War
Babatunde Tolu Afolabi

A detailed examination of the role of two critical non-state groups in the Liberian Civil War peace process – the diaspora and the religious – that provides key insights for policymakers and NGOs into the roles that civil society actors can play in conflict resolution and peacemaking.

The Liberian Civil War exemplified the “new wars” breaking out in Africa after the Cold War, and showed how collaboration between a regional economic grouping – in this case ECOWAS – and religious and diaspora actors might aid conflict resolution and the peacemaking process. Taking the war as a case study, this book examines the involvement of Liberia’s religious and diaspora groups, finding that their actions influenced both the trajectory of the conflict and the outcome of the peace process. The religious actors, initiators of the Liberian peace process, were mediators and dialogue facilitators, watchdogs and trustees during the war and its aftermath, and in the process were able to regain some of the societal influence that organized religion enjoyed during the 158 years of Americo-Liberian rule.

Babatunde T. Afolabi is a Senior Programme Manager at the Centre for Humanitarian Dialogue (HD).

The Eritrean National Service
Servitude for “the common good” and the Youth Exodus
Gaim Kibreab

Gives voice to the conscripts who are forced to serve indefinitely without remuneration under the ENS in a powerful critical survey of its effect from the Liberation Struggle to today.

The Eritrean National Service (ENS) lies at the core of the post-independence state, not only supplying its military, but affecting the country’s economy, social services, public sector and politics, driving its youth to escape national service by seeking employment and asylum elsewhere. Yet how did the ENS, which began as part of the “common good” degenerate into a modern form of slavery? Drawing on the testimony of the conscripts themselves, this book provides for the first time an in-depth and critical scrutiny of the ENS. The author discusses its historical backdrop, the rationales underlying it, and its goals and objectives; its transformative effects, as well as its impact on the country’s defence capability, and national identity.

Gaim Kibreab is Professor of Research and Director of Refugee Studies, School of Law and Social Science, London South Bank University.

The African Garrison State
Human Rights & Political Development in Eritrea – Revised & Updated
Kjetil Tronvoll & Daniel R. Mekonnen

Examines Eritrea’s deprivation of human rights since independence and its transformation into a militarised “garrison state”.

A comprehensive study of how and why the bright prospects of the new 1991 state of Eritrea were undercut, turning the country into one of the world’s most authoritarian, militarised, isolated, and human rights-abusing states. While the situation is bleak, it is not without hope: the epilogue describes the recent UN Commission of Inquiry process, the renewed international dialogue with Asmara and the new geopolitical dynamics.

Ploughing New Ground
Food, Farming & Environmental Change in Ethiopia
GETNET BEKELE

An in-depth analysis of the politics and practice of food production and supply in Ethiopia, and their impact on the largely agricultural economy and farming populations, who represent nearly 80 per cent of the country’s population.

In October 2016, the Ethiopian administration declared a State of Emergency in response to anti-Government demonstrations and mass riots. Land deals by the Government with foreign investors have put pressure on agricultural, rural areas. Today, disposessions, drought and social unrest surround fears of the worst food shortages in decades. Examining these developments in Ethiopia’s lake region, the author shows how transformations in state-society relations and the organization of production and exchange have impacted on a population of smallholder farmers for whom agriculture is not only the mainstay of the economy but a way of life.

GETNET BEKELE is Associate Professor of History at Oakland University, MI, where he teaches African History and the Environmental and Economic History of Africa and the Global South.

On Durban’s Docks
Zulu Workers, Rural Households, Global Labor
RALPH CALLEBERT

Offers a new approach to the study of labor on the subcontinent and globally, questioning the relevance of the predominant wage labor paradigm for Africa and the Global South.

Ralph Callebert examines the working and living conditions of Durban’s predominantly Zulu dock workers and the livelihoods of their rural households. These households relied on a combination of wage labor, pilferage, informal trade, and the rural economy; dock workers’ experiences were thus more intricate than a focus on wage labor alone could capture. The book examines their complex political identities, including their economic nationalism and fervent anti-Indian sentiments, in the context of these multifaceted livelihoods, offering a new approach to the study of labor on the subcontinent and globally.

RALPH CALLEBERT teaches history at the University of Toronto.

Markets on the Margins
Mineworkers, Job Creation and Enterprise Development
KATE PHILIP

Examines more than a decade of enterprise development strategies in marginal economic contexts in South Africa’s mining communities and shows how this might impact on development strategies.

In 1987, workers in South Africa’s National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) staged a historic national strike and 40,000 mineworkers lost their jobs. To assist them, the NUM set up a job creation programme, starting with worker co-operatives before shifting to wider enterprise development strategies in communities affected by on-going job losses – including in neighbouring countries. This book explores the lessons learned from trying to create jobs through enterprise development in marginal economic contexts, and the limits and opportunities that such market participation offers to improve livelihoods.

KATE PHILIP is a Senior Economic Advisor in the Government’s Technical Advice Centre (GTAC) of South Africa’s National Treasury.

Christianity and Social Change in French Cameroon
CHARLOTTE WALKER-SAID
A study of Christianity and society in Cameroon that illuminates the history of faith and cultural transformation among societies living under French rule 1914 to 1946. Explores the radical innovations of African Catholic and Protestant evangelists who used Christianity to challenge governments operating in Cameroon. As African believers transformed foreign missionary societies into profoundly local religious institutions, they established not only new African family and community models but also redefined African male guardianship over wives and children. Countering the economic and legal power wielded by African chiefs and sharply challenging French colonial rule, African Christian spiritual guides emerged as reformers of African family life and local authority.

Living Salvation in the East African Revival in Uganda
JASON BRUNER
Rexamines the East African Revival movement in Uganda, 1935–1955, arguing that through the movement African Christians developed a unique spiritual lifestyle. Starting in the mid-1930s, East African revivalists (or, Balokole: “the saved ones”) proclaimed a message of salvation, hoping to revive the mission churches of colonial East Africa. Frustrated by missionary Christianity, they preached that in order to be saved, converts had to confess their sins publicly, putting them “in the light.” Using archival collections, oral histories, and interviews, this study argues that the Balokole revival was a movement through which African Christians articulated and developed a unique spiritual lifestyle, one that responded creatively to the sociopolitical contexts of late colonial East Africa.

Creed & Grievance
Muslim–Christian Relations & Conflict Resolution in Northern Nigeria
Edited by ABDUL RAUFU MUSTAPHA & DAVID EHRHARDT
Analyses the complexities of Christian-Muslim conflict that threatens the fragile democracy of Nigeria, and the implications for global peace and security. Ethnic and cultural fragmentation, the frequent overlap between ethnicity and religion, and socio-political changes from the 1980s have resulted in acute polarization between Muslims and Christians in northern Nigeria. This book presents an in-depth exploration of the conflicts, which both threaten the region’s development and present a wider threat to global security. Examining the multiplicity of Muslim and Christian groups involved, the tensions between and within them, and appropriate and effective policy responses at local, national, and international levels, the authors also analyse three of the most contentious issues: conflict in Jos; the Boko Haram insurgency; and the challenges of legal pluralism posed by the declaration of full Sharia law in 12 Muslim majority states.

Tuning the Kingdom
Kawuugulu Music, Politics, and Storytelling in Buganda
DAMASCUS KAFUMBE

Examines how the Kawuugulu Clan Royal Musical Ensemble of the Kingdom of Buganda enforces politics among the Ganda people of south-central Uganda through stories passed down by oral tradition.

Draws on ethnographic research, musical and textual analyses, and an integrated narrative of oral and written accounts to examine how the Kawuugulu Clan Royal Musical Ensemble of the Kingdom of Buganda enforces principles of politics among the Baganda (Ganda) people of south-central Uganda through stories passed down by oral tradition. The book’s focus is the ensemble’s ability to shape kinship, leadership, and kingship through the use of stories that serve as records of and frameworks for enacting principles of these three domains.

DAMASCUS KAFUMBE is Assistant Professor of Music at Middlebury College.

A collection of playscripts and texts that give an English-reading audience access to key plays as well as less well-known and previously untranslated works – a superb resource for scholars and theatre practitioners.

Makes available some of the most influential, imaginative and exciting plays to come out of East and West Africa from the 1970s to the present day. The editors have selected plays, some well-known and some less widely available, that represent the diversity and richness of these two very different African regions, including a new translation from Amharic, and the English version of a play originally written in French. Each script is accompanied by an essay from an expert on the work, the playwright, and the context in which the play was produced, so that the volume will be of maximum use to both researchers and students of African theatre.

ALT 35: Focus on Egypt
African Literature Today
Edited by ERNEST N. EMENYONU

As well as a rare examination of Egyptian literature, this volume includes a non-themed section of Featured Articles and a Literary Supplement.

The main focus here is on Egyptian writers, especially those whose works have enriched African Literature through their depiction of historical, cultural and socio-political forces. Creativity has flourished in Arabic as well as the English language, producing acclaimed national and international writers whose thematic concerns have been as versatile as they have been controversial. Nawal El Saadawi provides a Foreword to the volume and an interview.

ERNEST N. EMENYONU is Professor of Africana Studies at the University of Michigan-Flint, USA.

ALT 34 Diaspora & Returns in Fiction
African Literature Today
Edited by ERNEST N. EMENYONU & PAULINE DODGSON-KATIYO

“Imagined or actual returns to a ‘homeland’ in African literature are examined in relation to changing concepts of identity, belonging, migration and space. Focuses on literary texts by African writers in which the protagonist returns to his/her ‘original’ or ancestral ‘home’ in Africa from other parts of the world. Ideas of return – intentional and actual – have been a consistent feature of the literature of Africa and the African diaspora. The contributors explore the ways in which African literature has represented returnees in a range of locations and dislocations including having a sense of belonging, being alienated in a country they can no longer recognize, or experiencing a multiple sense of place.

ALT 32 Politics & Social Justice
African Literature Today
Edited by ERNEST N. EMENYONU

Examines some of the varied African literary responses to politics and social justice and injustice under colonialism/neocolonialism. Many African writers have illustrated through their work different understandings of Chaima Achebe’s reference to “where and when the rain started beating Africa”. These works have recalled, recorded and reconfigured that past and taken the debate forward in its complex engagement with the critical issues of politics and social justice in the contemporary postcolonial/neocolonial context.
