THE ENGLISH EAST INDIA COMPANY’S SILK ENTERPRISE IN BENGAL, 1750-1850
Economy, Empire and Business
KAROLINA HUTKOV

This book examines the silk-processing activities of the English East India Company in Bengal.

Government encouragement of private investment into Britain’s colonies and territories, to feed the ever growing demand of silk production, resulted in the first transfer of Western technology to the East. The most successful firm to do so was the East India Company, pouring over £1 million into India, in a process that was to have serious consequences on the Indian economy.

SOCIETY & CULTURE

BRITISH HOUSES IN LATE MUGHAL DELHI
SYLVIA SHORTO

This book shows the ambivalence in the building activities of East India Company officials and reveals their true values and beliefs. Despite wishing to enforce cultural separation, many commissioned houses that, despite the exterior, were adapted to local living and many repurposed former religious buildings and palaces. Shorto demonstrates the interrelationship between failing Mughal and rising British power and custom.

AMERICAN POPULAR MUSIC IN BRITAIN’S RAJ
BRADLEY G. SHOPE

American Popular Music in Britain’s Raj is the first systematic study to address the influence of American popular music in India during British rule.

As the first systematic study to address the influence of American popular music in British India, Shope uses ethnographic and archival research to examine imported trends in the Bombay cabarets and Hindi film songs, identifying the key developments in these styles between the mid-19th and mid-20th century. The book also describes the frameworks that supported American styles and the influence of colonialism on their meaning and commercial value.

THE WARDLE FAMILY AND ITS CIRCLE
Textile Production in the Arts and Crafts Era
BRENDA M. KING

The Wardle family of Leek, Staffordshire, rose to prominence in fine textile production in the second half of the nineteenth century as internationally recognised producers who inspired the followers of the Arts and Crafts movement. Played out against the backdrop of the Anglo-Indian silk trade, this lavishly illustrated book shows the distinct Indian influences that were integrated with traditional British silk production.

THREADS OF GLOBAL DESIRE
Silk in the Pre-Modern World
Edited by DAGMAR SCHÄFER, GIORGIO RIELLO & LUCA MOL

The silk industry was one of the most important fields of production in the medieval and early modern world due to its high qualities, exceptional value and portability. This book considers how silk production developed both fledgling nations, by linking rural and urban production centres, and the early system of international trade by connecting the Far East to India, Persia and eventually Europe. Threads of Global Desire is the first attempt at a truly global study of silk with it recognising the political, cultural and economic interactions it stimulated in the pre-modern world.

DEFENDING BRITISH INDIA AGAINST NAPOLEON
The Foreign Policy of Governor-General Lord Minto, 1807-13
AMITA DAS
Edited and updated by ADITYA DAS
Following Napoleon’s military and political victories in Europe and the 1807 Persian alliance, the French threat to India seemed real and strengthening. The book examines the Governor-Generalship of Lord Minto and how he worked to mitigate this threat through conquest to the signing of alliances along the North West Frontier, whilst placing Minto in the wider European political context.

NAVAL RESISTANCE TO BRITAIN’S GROWING POWER IN INDIA, 1660-1800
The Saffron Banner and the Tiger of Mysore
PHILIP MACDOUGALL
Whilst most naval histories ignore the maritime activity of the Indian states, this book reverses that trend and outlines how the Mahratta Confederacy and Mysore posed a serious threat to Britain’s maritime position. These states blended their own technology with that of their European allies to become effective partners to the Dutch, French and Portuguese.

THE GREAT UPRISING IN INDIA, 1857-58
Untold Stories, Indian and British
ROSIE LLEWELLYN-JONES
The events of 1857-58 in India are seen here through a series of untold stories - and thereby from a series of different perspectives. It shows that these events were much more complex than suggested by the label “Indian Mutiny”, applied by British writers seeing it as a colonial rebellion, or by “The First War of Independence”, used by most Indian writers.

LASCARS AND INDIAN OCEAN SEAFARING, 1780-1860
Shipboard Life, Unrest and Mutiny
AARON JAFFER
Lascars were seamen from the Indian subcontinent and other areas of the Indian Ocean region employed aboard European ships from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries. The difficult working conditions, combined with their diverse set of ethnic backgrounds, often led to friction with their European officers.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY’S MARITIME SERVICE, 1746-1834
Masters of the Eastern Seas
JEAN SUTTON
The book charts in detail successive voyages by members of the Larkins family, who were leading owners of East India Company ships, showing what it was like to sail to and trade with India in this period. It provides a great deal of material on the dynamics of trade, warfare, developments in seamanship and navigation and the opening up of trade to China.

PROVINCIAL SOCIETY AND EMPIRE

The Cumbrian Counties and the East Indies, 1680-1829
K. J. SAVILLE-SMITH

The view that British Empire was built only by wealthy city merchants and London elites is countered here as it shows that the ambitions of the middling sort, who wanted to develop fortunes of their own, created India into the imperial jewel in the crown. Based on extensive original research on the Cambrian counties, the book portrays a provincial world heavily implicated in the East Indies.

THE EMERGENCE OF BRITISH POWER IN INDIA, 1600-1784

A Grand Strategic Interpretation
G J BRYANT

Bryant analyses the evolving grand strategy of the British East India Company in India between its foundation in 1600 and 1784, when the British Government took control of the Company’s political affairs. It shows why the Company moved from pursuing a purely trade orientated strategy to becoming involved in the military and political penetration of India.

THE JOURNAL OF BISHOP DANIEL WILSON OF CALCUTTA, 1845-1857
Edited by ANDREW ATHERSTONE
Daniel Wilson (1778-1858) was a prominent personality in the British administration of the Indian subcontinent during the mid-nineteenth century, in his position as bishop of the vast diocese of Calcutta from 1832. His journal covers the second half of his episcopate where his relationships with political and ecclesiastical power magnates, attitudes to Hinduism and Islam and his faith in the European civilizing mission are shown.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND RELIGION, 1698-1858
PENELOPE CARSON
This wide-ranging book charts how the East India Company grappled with religious issues in its multi-faith empire, putting them into the context of pressures exerted both in Britain and on the subcontinent. It deals with how the Company balanced its Christian identity with trying to be equitable to the different faiths it found in India.

THE ANXIETY OF AUTONOMY AND THE AESTHETICS OF GERMAN ORIENTALISM
NICHOLAS A. GERMANA
German Orientalism has commonly been seen as a form of latent colonialism designed to diagnose western ills. In this original publication, Germana sees Orientalism as an attempt to come to terms with the Other in German society. Drawing on the work of feminist scholars, Germana identifies the anxiety at the core of Kantian thought through emphasising aesthetics at the heart of Oriental discourse.

ORIENTING THE SELF
The German Literary Encounter with the Eastern Other
DEBRA N. PRAGER
For centuries, Europe’s eastward gaze has been wary if not hostile with the “Oriental” representing stereotypes such as fanaticism, moral laxity, and inscrutability. Much of German literature reinforced such clichés, but Prager argues that there was a section of German literature portraying the East as the scene of desire, fantasy, and fulfilment.

DEPLOYING ORIENTALISM IN CULTURE AND HISTORY
From Germany to Central and Eastern Europe
Edited by JAMES HODKINSON, JOHN WALKER, SHASWATI MAZUMDAR & JOHANNES FEICHTINGER
The concept and study of orientalism in Western culture gained a changed understanding from Edward Said’s now iconic 1978 book Orientalism. However, recent debate has moved beyond Said’s definition with multiple forms of Orientalism being identified as well as the epistemological fragility of the Occident and Orient as ideas. This volume focuses on the multi-faceted deployment of “orientalism” in the German-speaking and Central and Eastern European worlds.

IMAGINING GERMANY IMAGINING ASIA
Essays in Asian-German Studies
Edited by VERONIKA FUECHTNER & MARY RHIEL
Imagining Germany Imagining Asia demonstrates that from the Enlightenment onwards, Asia served as a foil for German fantasies of a cohesive national culture. Its essays argue that Asia and Germany have always shared cultural spaces, defying the idea of a one way influence through presenting texts from the eighteenth century to the current day.
