THE SWORD IN EARLY MEDIEVAL NORTHERN EUROPE
Experience, Identity, Representation
SUE BRUNNING
Swords have been objects of fascination for millennia. Looking beyond modern value judgements, this study contextualises Anglo-Saxon swords within their own milieu by focusing on contemporary perceptions, exploring how those who owned, used and encountered these artefacts actually thought about them. The investigation covers the entire Anglo-Saxon period and has two strands: the ‘presentation’ of swords in early medieval art, archaeology and texts; and the attitude of warriors towards swords.

NEW MEDIEVAL LITERATURES 19
Edited by PHILIP KNOX, KELLIE ROBERTSON, WENDY SCASE & LAURA ASHE
The annual New Medieval Literatures engages with intellectual and cultural pluralism in the Middle Ages and now. Alongside essays ranging across Britain and Europe is an examination of Old Norse sagas in an ecclesiical and postcolonial framework and a look at Old Norse works that reveal the traces of encounters with a racial other.

SEASONS IN THE LITERATURES OF THE MEDIEVAL NORTH
PAUL S. LANGESLAG
This book analyses the narrative and psychological functions of seasonal settings in the literatures of medieval England and Iceland from the eighth to the fourteenth century. Dealing with both the material realities and the figurative functions of the seasonal cycle, Langeslag informs his literary investigations with relevant concerns from economic history, patristic doctrine and decision theory.
A well-written, insightful, and resourceful book, which has much to offer scholars and students. REVIEW OF ENGLISH STUDIES

REPRESENTING BEASTS IN EARLY MEDIEVAL ENGLAND AND SCANDINAVIA
Edited by MICHAEL D.J. BINTLEY & THOMAS J. T. WILLIAMS
Drawing on the evidence of material culture, art, language, literature, place-names and landscapes, this collection considers the multi-faceted nature of the relationship between people and beasts. Essays reveal a world where the boundaries between humans, animals, monsters and objects were blurred and often permeable, and where to represent the bestial could be to hold a mirror to the self.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS IN MEDIEVAL EUROPEAN LITERATURE
CAROLYNE LARRINGTON
This book examines depictions of sibling relationships across medieval European literature, principally in the vernacular languages of Iceland, France, England and Germany. Larrington considers such matters as fraternal/sisterly loyalty (or not), sibling rivalry, incest, the effect on the relationship of marriage, and relations between quasi-siblings or sworn-brothers, across a broad range of texts.

LUDVIG IRGENS-JENSEN
The Life and Music of a Norwegian Composer
ARVID O. VOLLNES
Translated by BERYL FOSTER

Ludvig Irgens-Jensen was one of the towering creative figures in Norway whose distinctive tonal music is covered here in the first English language discussion of his life and music. As well as Irgens-Jensen’s works, we get a broad picture of Norwegian musical life from the 1920s to his death in 1969.

This is a thorough and solid first biography and Vollnes is a passionate advocate of his subject. Beryl Foster’s translation . . . is clear and nuanced. GRAMOPHONE
