EARLY MEDIEVAL STONE MONUMENTS

Materiality, Biography, Landscape

Edited by HOWARD WILLIAMS, JOANNE KIRTON & MEGGEN GONDEK

New essays consider early medieval inscribed and sculpted stone monuments, including important memorials in Britain, Ireland and Scandinavia. Building round the themes of materiality, biography and landscape, they reveal how carved stones created senses of identity and history for early medieval communities, considering their significance in commemorative practice and performance; the use and re-use of the monuments; and their meanings and associations for the society around them.

REPRESENTING BEASTS IN EARLY MEDIEVAL ENGLAND AND SCANDINAVIA

Edited by MICHAEL D.J. BINTLEY & THOMAS J.T. WILLIAMS

This book discusses the various ways in which the early English and Scandinavians viewed and represented the other inhabitants of their world, examining the multi-faceted nature of the relationship between people and beasts. Drawing on the evidence of material culture, art, language, literature, place-names and landscapes, the studies reveal a world where the boundaries between humans, animals, monsters and objects were blurred and often permeable, and where to represent the bestial could be to hold a mirror to the self.

EMOTIONS IN MEDIEVAL ARTHURIAN LITERATURE

Body, Mind, Voice

Edited by FRANK BRANDSMA, CAROLYNE LARRINGTON & CORINNE SAUNDERS

Literary texts complicate our understanding of medieval emotions; they not only represent characters reacting emotionally to the behaviour of others within the text, but also evoke and play upon the emotion in the audiences which heard these texts performed. The portrayal of emotion in the most prominent and influential story matter of the Middle Ages, the Arthurian legend, is the subject of this volume, covering texts written in English, French, Dutch, German, Latin and Norwegian.

SEASONS IN THE LITERATURES OF THE MEDIEVAL NORTH

PAUL S. LANGESLAG

To the cultures of medieval northwestern Europe, the changing of the seasons was a material and economic reality that strongly informed the labour, travel and ritual calendars. This book analyses the narrative and psychological functions of seasonal settings in the literatures of medieval England and Iceland from the eighth to the fourteenth century, including Nordic texts such as Eiríks saga rauða, Grettis saga Ásmundarsonar and Hákonar saga góða.

WRITING EUROPE, 500-1450

Texts and Contexts

Edited by AIDAN CONTI, ORIETTA DA ROLD & PHILIP SHAW

Medieval Europe was characterized by a sophisticated market for the production, exchange and sale of written texts. Bringing together a range of papers centred on manuscript studies and textual criticism, this volume examines the processes through which Europe's different parts entered into modern reading, writing and communicative practices; includes essays on Latin composition in medieval Norway and Germanic language digraphs.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS IN MEDIEVAL EUROPEAN LITERATURE

CAROLYNE LARRINGTON

This text considers the sibling relationships depicted in medieval European literature, focusing on the important vernacular literatures of Iceland, France, England and Germany. Building on recent research on siblings in psychology, history and social science this book reveals multiple perspectives on brothers' and sisters' emotions: love, hate, rivalry, desire, nurturing and ambivalence underlie sibling stories. These narratives are in turn inflected by rank, social context and most crucially, gender.

THE SCANDINAVIANS FROM THE VENDEL PERIOD TO THE TENTH CENTURY

An Ethnographic Perspective

Edited by JUDITH JESCH

Ethnographic studies trace the background to and impact of urbanisation, Christianisation, and the development of royal power, which stimulated the transition from the Viking age to the medieval period. Using a diverse range of evidence, this volume investigates the social, economic and symbolic structures of early Scandinavia at the time of the Viking expansion.

EAST ANGLIA AND ITS NORTH SEA WORLD IN THE MIDDLE AGES

Edited by DAVID BATES & ROBERT LIDDIARD

East Anglia was a distinctive English region during the Middle Ages, but it was one that owed much of its character and identity to its place in a much wider "North Sea World" that stretched from the English Channel to Iceland, the Baltic and beyond. This collection explores this relatively peaceful relationship.
